Year in Review

The past year, 1989, brought us into a new decade with changes across the world. In science new, never-before-seen pictures of Neptune were shown to the world. Chinese students, numbering over one million, amassed in Tiananmen Square of Peking, China, and rocked the world in their desire for a democratic government. The wave of democracy spread when the repressive East German government literally tore down its walls, and opened itself to the arms of democracy. Like falling dominoes, the European countries under the Soviet sphere of influence since World War II had their governments collapse. The sports industry was shocked as long time baseball hero and then Reds manager, Pete Rose, was brought up on charges of gambling and illegal betting. Fear was still within the hearts of many as millions fell victim to the AIDS virus. In the music industry, revival of such groups as the The Rolling Stones and The Who recalled memories and music. Anniversaries were celebrated this year, such as ten years of the Sony walkman and a hundred years of the bra. All in all, 1989 set the stage for a new decade which will surely change the world.

At the completion of every production, the set goes through a "strike" where all the scenery is dismantled and revamped for the next project.

Earlier this year KE changed its look and scenery drastically. Construction penetrated every corner of the building. Rooms were changed, windows were boarded, and disruptive sounds left many of us frustrated. Parking was a nightmare with students' parking in the streets. For several months the phrase "The early bird gets the parking spot" was true. But, the inconveniences, annoyances, and sacrifices became worth the wear when KE's facelift was complete.

Now, KE has a new facade and a new image for the 90's. This set is ready for the many scenes yet to come...

(clockwise)

1. Scaffolding gives a contemporary "metal look" to the original building.
2. Balance and coordination are a vital part of construction work.
3. Construction workers replace teachers and students in the classroom.
4. A construction worker takes a few moments to get some "relief".
5. Strict rules apply to crossing scaffolding and snow fences.
6. The workers take a break and dance on a window ledge.

Into The Sunset . . .

In 1969's True Grit, John Wayne victoriously left the screen, becoming a blur in an engulfing sunset. Likewise, in 1989's Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade, Harrison Ford left riding his horse into a blazing sunset. With exams complete, each of us will also enact our final scene.

The lines have been said, the characters changed, and the audience content. The movie overture plays in the background. The character delivers his last line, enters his car, and slowly rides off into the sunset...

Editor's Note

The book you now hold in your hands is the culmination of much time and effort. It is not the effort of one person or one advisor but the sacrifices of the entire SPECTRUM '90 staff. Together, they took my rough ideas and created a yearbook far better than we ever imagined. I've been told that quality has its cost. The production of SPECTRUM '90 is the best example I know.

The movie which has unraveled before your eyes was not an easy task. After all, how do you make something moving and three dimensional occur on plain sheets of paper? Thank you to the staff who rose to the challenge and made it occur.

Frustration has many forms, and we have seen them all...from Suzanne's insane displays to Steve's bitter sarcasm and Kate's silent sessions. We cried and lived yearbook. We gave up our Friday nights (and with them our social lives), our Saturdays, and all of our spare time. These sacrifices have been worth it. We grew.

Now, as our main characters ride off into the sunset, the credits roll with special appreciation to:

Mr. Ihrig - You've sacrificed more than any of us. I only hope that your high expectations of "my book" were not disappointments.

Mrs. Marino - You have spent so much time and endured frustration with SPECTRUM '90. You have taught me a lot. I only hope that I taught you something too.

Mr. Thayer and Mr. Eaton - Your computer expertise helped me through difficult MAC situations.

Mom and Dad - Thanks for taking pictures, reading copy, and understanding my absence. I'll be home soon...it's done. Really, I mean it this time; it's done.

Michele - There were times when I lost faith in anything getting done. But not when it came to you. You were always there to develop, cut, paste, and anything I needed.

Sheila, Janet, Jen, Kory - Your extra time and perseverance helped me through long, long days. You spent hours helping the SPECTRUM in many ways.

Lorene - You experienced the horrors of the color consignment with me. Thanks for your outside opinions on so many ideas.

Kate, John, Steve - Thanks for all the support, diligence, and attempts at making yearbook fun.

Melissa, Tina, Mary, and Rebecca - It might have taken lot of frustration, but you finally did it. You should feel a sense of achievement.

Amy, Bryan - You weren't always easy to find, but your writing helped in ways I can't express.

Suzanne - Only you know the real feeling of yearbook pressure. Thanks for lasting through it. By the way, which is more difficult, activities or athletics?
