CELEBRATING DIVERSITY

I love to fall into respect
Looking straight down truth's eyes
Staring at my brain
Constellations of far beyond control
Steady tracing breaks a key Without a key there is no stolen la-la Star child wakes up tonight amongst the cloudy gray whoopie
the sky
catches nothing to be seen, only heard, a song, music of a GILLO lighter than a line deep with a slap of - wonder power carelessly written

If a picture's worth a thousand words, then a memory is worth a million.

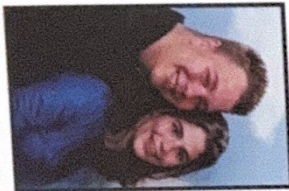

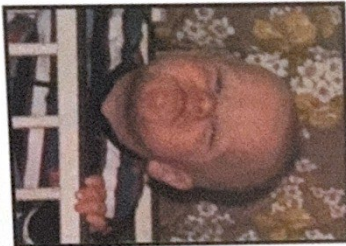

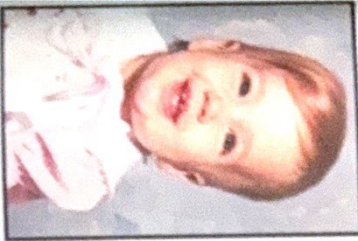

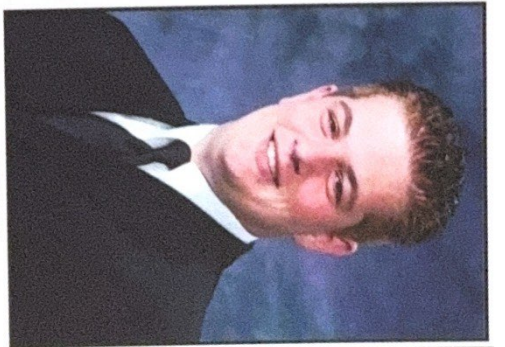

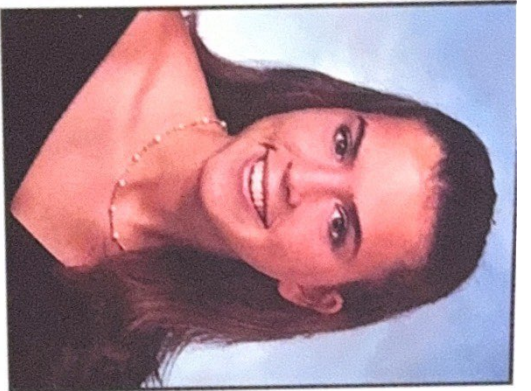

Kind words may be short and easy to speak, but the echoes are truly endless.

Graduation is only a concept. In real life everyday you graduate. Graduation is a process that goes on until the last day of your life. If you can grasp that, you'll make a difference.

"We picked up our caps and gowns and all that Senior stuff that's supposed to help us remember the good 'ole days, but some of the things that you remember most can't be put on paper. That day finally came, and you sat there with all of the friends that you have made over the years, you looked at your family and deep down you knew that this was a once in a lifetime moment. It was the last time in your life that these people would all be together in one place. Yeah there would be reunions, but there was always that chance that one person couldn't make it there. You looked back on your time with these people and realized that it was short lived and that it didn't seem as if there was time for everything you wanted to accomplish: sports, activities, SAT's, ACT's, and all that good stuff. They called your name, your tassel got turned, and you got a piece of paper that said you were smart. Then you said goodbye, maybe to your town, your school, and to your friends. You know that you can go back to visit but there will be strangers in the halls and it's not the same. It's different, and you're different. But it's not the end. In fact, it's just the beginning."
