KE SPECTRUM 2008

Every year Kenmore East High School changes. Every year Kenmore East stays the same. The incongruity of these two statements illustrates one challenge for my students who care enough to work on our school's yearbook.

More daunting for my students is the realization that our culture takes comfort in and reveres the notion that everybody has a right to their own opinion irrespective of how ill-conceived, biased, uninformed, or thoughtless it may be. This is a second challenge for my students to wrestle with: Critics can be cruel. I have told them on several occasions to brace themselves for thoughtless commentary.

The only thing I could offer them as a comforting gesture was to tell those individuals who worked their hardest that I was proud and fortunate to work alongside them this year. I told them that I would value their effort, support and proclaim their achievements to our school, protest when people take a weak supposal of their worth, set the record straight, and dissolve any affront to their integrity. I stand behind my students who work the hardest, produce the best, and create the finest.

Joni Becker and Kaitlyn Hamm took it to the next level this year for our program. Nobody does it better than these two class acts; Their work and creativity are priceless. Joni never gets rattled... ever... She was always there to fix a problem or solve a design impasse. Kaitlyn packs a mean literal and creative punch.

It was the year of the rookie for the Spectrum this year; They made a huge impression! Molly Lundquist, Alex Conradi, Kelsey Schmidt, and Melissa Koepfel dominated the design challenges of this publication. They made me proud of this year's book. I loved watching all my students take blank sheets of virtual paper and make statements with them.

Making yearbooks, in my simple mind, is the closest a man can come to birthing a child: I carried this beast around for nine months; The last week was really painful. Both the book and I are doing just fine... thanks for wondering. I hope you enjoy this book.

"Here's to the nights that turned into mornings, and the friends that turned into family."
Life is too short to wake up in the morning with regrets. So love the people who treat you right, forget the ones who don't. Believe that everything happens for a reason. If you get a chance, take it, it changes your life then let it. Nobody said it would be easy, they just promised it would be worth it.

Whoever uses the law against his fellow man is either a fool or a coward.
Whoever cannot live without that law is both. For so says the wounded man to his assailant, "If I live, I will kill you;
if I die, all is forgiven."
So says the Rule of Honor.

People said I've changed so much. Well, here's the honest truth. I grew up. I stopped caring of what people think. I learned that you can't always be happy. I accepted reality. My family thank you for putting up with me. I love you more than you will ever know. I can't thank you for showing me that life is about not taking things so seriously. Thank you for always being there as being my best friend. Me and the boys. Yarny. Goodbye. Oh. Go now and live your own life. And live it your way. Love, Lindsey

The road goes ever on and on Down from the door where it began
Now far ahead the Road has gone,
And I must follow, if I can,
Pursuing it with eager feet,
Until it joins some larger way
Where many paths and errands meet
And whither then? I cannot say.
